On Monday, Winner was sentenced in a court in Augusta, Ga., to serve up to 63 months in prison for leaking classified information related to the Russian government's interference in the 2016 presidential election. Winner could have been sentenced to up to 10 years. "Even though she lost the battle with cancer, in so many ways she won the war," said U.S. Rep. Rick Allen of the 4th District of Georgia. "Her family will do a wonderful job of honoring her life and bringing her story to a world audience." Winner, a former contract employee for Pluribus International Corp, was arrested in July 2017 after allegedly leaking information to The Intercept, an online news organization. Winner was arrested after a message she allegedly wrote to a contact was discovered in a parking lot in North Augusta, S.C., on June 3, 2017, according to the criminal complaint. She has admitted to leaking classified documents, and her identity was not officially revealed until after her arrest. The WikiLeaks Twitter account reported last year that Winner was sentenced to five years in prison on "gross negligence" charges for leaking classified information about Russian attempts to infiltrate U.S. voting software. Another Twitter account belonging to Winner also appears to have been active on July 23, 2017, when she tweeted that "it feels good to be alive and free after surviving cancer twice." Winner also tweeted on June 3, 2017, that "I feel good for America. They finally got a taste of their own medicine." She also tweeted on May 9, 2017, that "I have a message for the person who gave me this job." Winner's father, Mike Winner, said he knew about his daughter's arrest a few days after it happened and said she needed help for people who might have been watching her and felt guilty for her arrest. He said she needed help from mental health professionals, something he said she was not getting. Winner faced a maximum of 10 years in prison. "She was offered a plea
